European Winter Wheat Area

Washinston, May 27.—The area of winter wheat for 1921-1922 in European countries for which figures are now available, is 31,307,000 acres, according to advices received by the Department of Agriculture. This is 1,398,000 acres less than last year. The countries covered are Heigium, Bulgaria, Spain, Finland, France, Poland, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia. The total area sown to ryo for the season 1921-22; in the same countries is 18,808,040 acres as compared with 15,067,000 last year. The increase occurs mainly in Poland, where the area sown to rye is 11,940,000 acres, as compared with 6,872,000 acres last year. Other countries show small decreases. Planting of corn is progressing rapidly in Central Europe, the report said, although there is complaint of excessive rain in some sections. The quality of the corn crop in Argentina is good, and fine weather is favoring the harvesting, but the yield is reported as not up to early expectations. The corn crop in Uruguay was reported as fair, but in the Union of South Africa the crop was said to have suffered from drought.
